ROB ROY.

As the authors of "Robin Hood," Messrs. DeKoven and Smith, enjoy the distinction of having written the most successful light opera on record. They have never repeated their success, although Mr. DeKoven has conceived the clever plan of employing again various strains from "Robin Hood" in his later efforts. This is probably all right, but it is a bit disconcerting at first in "Captain Sheridan's" entrance song to sing "We Come, We Come to the Sound of the Drum," etc., to the same tune to which we used to sing about the tailor who dwelt near old Sherwood edge and was deft with an old cross-bow. However, it is a pretty tune and it's nice to have a variety of words for it.

Well, "Rob Roy" is a very charming opera and since it was produced last October in New York it has enjoyed unwavering popularity and the managers have been troubled to know what to do with their money. This prosperity they deserve, however, for the success is probably due as much to the gorgeous manner in which it is produced as to the opera itself. The company is the best comic opera troupe that has been seen here for a long time and the scenery is really beautiful. The "Bostonians" must take counsel among themselves or they will be dusting off their old laurels instead of winning fresh ones. With three such prima donnas as Mesdames Corden, Macneil and O'Keefe and such men as Pruette, Berthold, McLaughlin and Carroll as comedians, the Whitney Opera company are prepared to do almost as many brave things as "Rob Roy" himself.

The story is the well known one about Rob Roy MacGregor's heroic defense of Bonnie Prince Charlie and Flora MacDonald's faithful love. The rest of the characters are of less importance to history, but of great consequence in the opera. The librettist has shown a keen sense of humor in creating such droll personages as Dugald MacWhie, the mayor of Perth, Tammas MacSorelle, his henchman, and Sandy MacSherry, the town-crier. Mr. Carroll as the mayor is the life of the play. He has fun in his heels as well as his head. His dancing is fine and his puns were new and clever. Juliette Corden, who is an old favorite here, played the part of Janet, the mayor's daughter. She is just as good nowadays as a blonde, as she used to be when she was a brunette and sang "Mignon" with the Boston Ideal. Berthold, Berthold as the prince and Lillian Macneil as Flora sang both extremely well. Their duets were well done, the one, "Marry for Love," containing the prettiest waltz in the opera. William McLaughlin has a fine bass voice and acts his part of Lochiel very well. Anna O'Keefe, who is a very handsome woman, made a stunning appearance as Captain Sheridan.

The music is very Scotch throughout. There are those to whom the intervals and syncopations of Scotch music are a bore and whom the sound of bagpipes makes profane and otherwise violent. Such must refrain from "Rob Roy" for the noise never ceases. When the bagpipes retire, lest one should get sleepy, enter the English troops to the tooting of the lusty life. The ensemble music is fine throughout, especially at the end of Act I, where the clans enter, each singing one of the hearty Scotch folk songs, all being blended into a wonderfully clever finale. The ballad, "There Was a Merry Miller," which Juliette Corden sings in a captivating manner all her own, will probably be the most popular of the melodies.

The performance was badly cut in the afternoon and there was a good deal of play for which the audience were hardly grateful. In the evening the performance was fine in every respect and the audience was large and fashionable.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

Hyperion.

In dramatizing Du Maurier's famous novel, "Trilby," Paul M. Potter has made little or no effort to do what was for him impossible. Trilby, that idol of the Quarter Latin, that enchanting romance of artist life in Paris, where in the truth is told and seen only as a poet can tell and see. "The Trilby" of George Du Maurier, which concludes with the brief melancholy and obscure narrative of the subjection of a soul by hypnotic suggestion to the will of an evil tyrant, is turned by Mr. Potter into a drama of hypnotism altogether. This is "Trilby" as seen in Paul Potter's dramatization; the most remarkable play seen in this country since the stage was first used as a medium of entertainment. A splendid company, that of A. M. Palmer, will present the play. For grandeur of scenic effect and stage excellence the production of "Trilby" cannot be surpassed. It will be seen here for the first time on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 23 and 24, at the Hyperion. Sale of seats opens May 21.

Grand Opera House.

A large audience was present to see the "Two Flats" at the Grand opera house last night. It will be presented at the matinee to-day and again in the evening. "The Two Flats" was written by Frank Dumont, author of "The Raskinmakers," and other comedies, and if his intention were to make people laugh he has carried them on to the letter for from rise to fall of the curtain the audience feel in a happy state of mind and many have laughed

Hamden, in said district, deceased.

Upon application of Alvina J. Charteris, praying that an instrument in writing purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased may be proved, approved, allowed and admitted to probate, letters testamentary may be granted upon the estate of said deceased, as per application on file more fully appears, it is ORDERED, that said application be heard and determined at a Probate Court to be held at New Haven, in said district, on the 24th day of May, A. D. 1895, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and that notice be given of the pendency of said application and the time and place of hearing thereon, by publishing the same three times in some newspaper having a circulation in said district.

themselves sore, so if you have the blues and want to drive away dull care, go and see "The Two Flats." Harry Watson and Alice Hutchings are exceedingly amusing in their respective parts. Amelia Glover appears with this company, the gifted American dancers, whose terpsichorean ability has been previously demonstrated here several times. She is the very personification of grace and agility, and is possessed of a degree of magnetism that is irresistible. The prices at the matinee will be 10c and 20c. In the evening reserved seats 50c and 50c.

The attraction at the Grand opera house the first three days next week will be "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which character will be taken by little Annie Laughlin, the charming child actress. There will be matinees Tuesday and Wednesday. After the matinee an orange tea will be served to the little ones. They will be received by the "Little Lord" on the stage.

Poll's Wanderland Theater.

Bonnie Thornton will leave us to-night. Her last appearance at the Wanderland in the dainty, spicy songs that have given so much pleasure during the week, will undoubtedly be the occasion of a great parting manifestation. Little Western will undoubtedly also be the recipient of much hearty appreciation on the occasion of her last appearance to-night in her brilliant instrumental specialty. The strong specialty company will also come in for much applause likewise. Next week's great attraction will be the three Donaghetts, a remarkable trio of European pantomimists and gymnasts, who have been a star feature in every theater where they have appeared. Supporting them will appear the beautiful Washington sisters, Griffling and Brice, the juvenile Ferguson brothers, Allen May and many others of like eminent reputation.
